Prompt

AI tools have quickly become widespread since 2022, with numerous users across the internet using them for many different purposes. Some include image and video generation, summarizing academic materials, and assisting with the creation of research papers. The purpose of this paper is to generate a resume using multiple LLMs. The two LLMs used to create the resume are ChatGPT and Gemini, two popular and commonly used AI tools. Using the same prompt, the results from these LLMs will be compared.

In creating the prompt, the resume details are first listed, including the full name, contact information, educational background, skills, and projects or experience. This is to ensure the content is accurate and consistent across the two AI tools. Below are the personal details needed for the resume content:

Comparison Table

After generating the two outputs, I then compared the results using four criteria: structure, clarity, formatting, and overall quality. Below is a table of the comparison between the two outputs:

Criteria	LLM #1 (ChatGPT)	LLM #2 (Gemini)
Content Completeness	✓	✓
Formatting and Structure		✓
Professional Tone	✓	✓
Clarity and Conciseness	✓
Creativity or Enhancement		✓
Overall Quality		✓

Both AI systems provided complete resumes with no missing information or sections and maintained a proper, professional tone. However, that is where the similarities end. In terms of clarity and conciseness, ChatGPT conveyed the message with fewer words than Gemini. On the other hand, Gemini had a better structure, enhancing the overall professionalism of the output. Because of this, I would consider Gemini to have better overall quality.

Reflection

From what I observed, Gemini produced a better output than ChatGPT. I noticed that Gemini included fully detailed descriptions in each section of the resume, whereas ChatGPT did not. I also noticed that ChatGPT and Gemini arranged the sections differently. The former strictly adhered to the prompt's order, while the latter rearranged the sections by relevance. Gemini also included a references section, which I did not prompt. Moreover, the executive summary segments focus on different things. ChatGPT was well-rounded, including a short sentence about my demeanor, while Gemini focused on skills and experience. Ultimately, ChatGPT followed the prompt closely, while Gemini went beyond that.

In my final resume, I combined Gemini's structure and enhancements with ChatGPT's conciseness. I then added a photo of myself, adjusted the formatting to keep the content on one page, and added small personal touches to make it feel authentic.

I learned that various AI tools deliver different results, even when being given the same prompt. I also noticed that before, when I tried summarizing a piece of text using ChatGPT and Perplexity. However, it is precisely in those differences that I can compare, contrast, and further improve on their works. In addition, I learned that the AI can also be inconsistent, with limited parameters for its content. In this instance, even when I specified a one-page resume, both AIs generated content that exceeded it. Therefore, it is still necessary to double-check its output before deeming it complete.

Final Resume

After comparing and contrasting the two outputs, I created the final resume, combining the strengths of each AI-generated output. The resulting resume is shown on the following page.
